

The Wall Street Journal (2006-2010)

The Weekend Journal cover stacked televisions dating from the first televised presidential debate and how it changed through the years.

The Weekend Journal cover design used an old fading Photograph to say that foreign aid isn't helping.

Men of Steel illustration was about the colorful history of men who owned the railroads in America.

Cover story had a man sit in a directors chair looking at flatscreens of tv shows that didn't believe would find another season. Each screen Is numbered and correspond with an infographic below.

Mixed Interactive (2014-2016)

The law office of John Paragano with the “P” in a shape of an abstract gavel.

Brandon Lee is a life and relationship coach. You can see the “B” & “L” within the logo.

Sagres is Portuguese for “discovery”. The letters are meant to be shaped like a wave against a boat.

Silvana's Cleaning Services' full logo with a reminder for people to “Focus on the things that mater” and let her do the cleaning.